

Facility & Asset Management

Wednesday, March 24th 2010

You are cordially invited ....

Like many other industries, pharmaceutical manufacturers are looking to focus on core competencies and to outsource their non-core activities to others – namely companies who do have that activity as a core competency.

The regulatory framework of the pharmaceutical industry poses particular challenges for the maintenance function and methodology and this, in turn, has implications for the selection of outsourcing partners.

The first presentation will be from a user's perspective and present specific examples of FM in action in a major pharmaceutical manufacturing environment and will also consider the longer term benefits of integrating projects and maintenance.

The second presentation will be from the perspective of a service provider and will, naturally, focus on the benefits of FM as well as the particular challenges of offering the service to a regulated industry.

The final presentation will be an introduction to the ISPE Good Practice Guide to Maintenance, which focuses on cost-effective compliance and seeks to provide a practical interpretation of the required elements of a pharmaceutical maintenance programme
